

Dr Shoji MIYAGAWA is currently Director, Division of Infectious Disease Research, Department of Research Promotion, the Japan Agency for Medical Research and Development (AMED). He has been working mainly in the Ministry of Health, Labour and Welfare (MHLW), Japan on regulatory aspects on food safety and public health including infectious disease control and prevention since he joined MHLW in 1987. He was appointed Technical Officer, the Food Safety Division, World Health Organization (WHO), Geneva in 1994, Counselor, the Permanent Mission of Japan to the United Nations, New York in 2008, Director, International Cooperation Division, the National Institute of Infectious Diseases (NIID), Japan in 2011, and Director, Infectious Diseases Information Surveillance Office, MHLW in 2015. He graduated from the Veterinary School of the Osaka Prefectural University in 1987.